

The Ultimate Question

The sure-fire way to drive “good profits” for “true growth” is to ask, The Ultimate Question ... according to best-selling author, Fred Reichheld.

When you ask The Ultimate Question of your customers, you can acquire your company’s NPS (Net Promoter Score). By so doing, you will discover how leading business organizations transform ordinary customers into Promoters. Here is The Ultimate Question ... and what to ask next based on the scores you receive:

Q1. “How likely is it that you would recommend [product name] to friends or colleagues?”

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1 0

Promoters: Anyone who answered Q1 with a 9 or 10 are “Promoters” and will be asked to answer Q2.

Passives: Anyone who answered Q1 with a 7 or 8 are “Passives” and asked to answer Q3.

Detractors: Anyone who answered Q1 with a 0-6 are “Detractors” and asked to answer Q4.

Q2. If your score in Question #1 was a 9 or 10, please answer the following question: “What specifically would you tell someone to get them to try [product name]?” (Hint: This is a testimonial)

Q3. If your score in Question #1 was a 7 or 8, please answer the following question: “What would it take for you to rate [product name] a 10?”

Q4. If your score in Question #1 was a 0 to 6, please answer the following question: “What is the reason or reasons for your score?”

Your Company’s Net Promoter Score (NPS)

NPS = (% of Promoters) - (% of Detractors)
