Your Turn - Take Action

To make progress, you have to take action at the end of each testing cycle, based on what you've learned from your experiments.

Take the Business Model Canvas and Value Proposition Canvas of your idea, as well as the Test Card and Learning Card you created in previous lessons, and assess which action to take.

You can take four different types of action:

- New Hypothesis: Stay in testing, and move on to a new hypothesis
- Same Hypothesis: Continue testing the same hypothesis in order to collect further evidence
- Update BM and VP: Move to design and update your business model and value proposition
- Kill idea: The evidence you collected demonstrates that your idea won't work in reality

TOTAL TIME: 20min per experiment

Directions

1. Confidence Levels

Before making any decisions, you need to determine how confident you can be about the validity of your hypothesis. Two questions help you with that:

1. How strong is the evidence you collected? This gives you an indication if the evidence that an experiment produced is of high quality.
