

When trying to identify a customer's jobs-to-be done, ask "What are they trying to get done in their work and in their lives?"

Jobs describe the things your customers are trying to get done in their work or in their life. This includes tasks they are trying to perform and complete, problems they are trying to solve, and needs they are trying to satisfy.

Let's look at an example: Imagine you are traveling by airplane to a business meeting. What jobs are you trying to get done as a business traveler?

Take a few minutes to write down as many jobs as you can think of. The next video will debrief this exercise and provide you with some sample jobs-to-be-done.
