

The exercise below is a design thinking and creativity exercise to practice working with alternative directions for the same starting point.

The Bicycle Exercise

Your starting point is a bicycle and €1,000. Grab a pen and paper and come up with 10 different ideas for a value proposition (e.g. a bike rental service for your neighborhood). There is no need to map out the Value Proposition Canvas. Just write down 10 ideas.

Select three of the ideas and make them a bit more tangible by sketching out an advertising poster for each on a piece of paper. The ad should contain three things:

- A title/headline
- An image
- A slogan

For each one of the posters, come up with three reasons why this is a brilliant idea and three reasons why this is a silly idea.

Design thinking processes like the above are useful to create alternative directions to improve an existing value proposition or create a new one.