

At this point, It's important to acknowledge that your prototypes are really just a set of assumptions or hypotheses. Use your Value Proposition Canvas prototype to help identify the most important things that must be true for your idea to work. These hypotheses are what you will test when you “get out of the building.”

1. Look at each idea from your improved Value Proposition Canvas. Identify the assumptions that your idea is currently built on. Then articulate a hypothesis for each of your ideas.
2. Next, rank all your hypotheses in order of how critical they are for your idea to survive and thrive. Start with your Customer Profile first. Then move to your Value Proposition.
3. Ask yourself:
 - Are the hypotheses critical to the success of your customer?
 - Are the hypotheses critical to the success of your value proposition?
 - Have you prioritized the most critical hypotheses first for
